Niall O'Brien is a highly successful photographer and an exciting filmmaker. In 2015 he co-wrote and directed short film 'A Message From Tar Creek' and recently directed music videos for Foals and Breton, amongst others. Born in Dublin, Ireland, he studied fine art photography at the Dun Laoghaire Institute of Art, Design and Technology. He has exhibited his photography widely in a number of continents and has many awards to his name. With a background in documentary Niall's feature and commercial work can retain this honest value while being able to explore other visual territories, keeping the work fresh and diverse. His commercial work includes projects for Canon, Nike, Adidas, Levis, San Miguel, Persil, tv show Legends, RFU and an honest, powerful and sometimes stark look at what it means to be a member of London's Met Police force. Niall continues to exhibit globally and is currently working on numerous personal and commercial projects in Europe and USA.
